River-Town Native Dies

Victoria Smith Lived in Historic De Soto

Mrs. Victoria Smith, a native of the historic river town of De Soto near Blair and an Omaha resident more than 40 years, died Tuesday morning at a local hospital. She was 95 years old.

She was the mother of Seymour L. Smith, Omaha attorney; E. Arline Smith, retired Omaha school teacher, and Roland P. Smith of Blair. She had lived for many years with her daughter at 806 North Forty-third Street.

Her husband, Lee, a leading Washington County Democrat and farmer, died in 1916.

Her father, Charles Seltz, was a pioneer merchant in De Soto.

Mrs. Smith took delight in reminiscing about the old town, recalling when the Indians came to her father's store to trade furs for provisions. She remembered how her father learned to speak the language of the Omahas.

She was proud to relate her acquaintance with the late Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock and recount the time she entertained him in her home when he was campaigning for office.

She also was host to William Jennings Bryan on many occasions.

Besides the two sons and daughter, she is survived by three grandchildren, District Judge Robert L. Smith of Omaha, Mrs. Vivian Meyers of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Roland Smith, Jr., of Blair, and 11 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be 1 p. m. Friday at Brailey and Dorrance Mortuary, with burial at the Blair Cemetery.
