

Dan Greeno Kind To Others ✓

Dan Greeno, lifetime resident of the community, who died at the age of 68 years, never did receive or seek the headlines for his many kind and gracious deeds.

However, if one were to multiply his many acts of kindness toward others they would surpass those of the majority of residents of our area.

Hundreds, Dana College students and faculty members and residents of the area, were the recipients of his graciousness.

For a number of years he transported suitcases, boxes and trunks from downtown Blair to Dana College, for the students. No fee was charged for the service.

Once each year, for many years, Dana students and faculty members enjoyed a chicken dinner at the college dining hall, thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Greeno. They not only provided the chickens, but cleaned and dressed them.

Once each year, for many years, strawberries from the Greeno garden were picked, stemmed and cleaned and delivered to the college dining hall so students and faculty members could enjoy strawberry shortcake.

These are but a few of his many kind deeds.

Many a resident of the community has voiced the opinion that Mr. Greeno did not charge a sufficient fee for his services. Some demonstrated their appreciation by adding extra dollars to the requested fee for services.

Greeno was never classified as a community leader nor a financial success—but, there is little doubt but what the Greenos sacrificed more, and with a most gracious attitude, than many much better financially established. He demonstrated a willingness to help others at a sacrifice for himself and his wife.

He possessed something which money cannot purchase—appreciation of mankind and a determination to share with others some of his worldly possessions, plus hard work.

His kind and gracious deeds reflect that he was a man of sound character. He not only believed in peace and good will, but put the theory into practice during his lifetime.

If more of us demonstrated the same attitude toward fellow men, during our short time on this earth, man would not devote so much time seeking a way to peace—peace and good will would reign among all mankind.
