

Dana plans on celebrating National Christian College Sunday, April 19, with posters and church bulletins being supplied to congregations desiring them. A special four-page section in the April 15 issue of the Ansgar Lutheran will also tell the story of the Christian college's role in national development. This Sunday should remind us once again of our obligations in promoting Christian Higher Education. As alumni, we feel the need to support this movement with increased financial gifts, and through increased effort in promoting Dana College among prospective students. We, as a working force, are the greatest asset a small church college can possess . . .

From the Editors

We welcome the contributions of Art Simon and Dr. Elmer Rasmussen to this issue. Art, as many of you know, served as Student Body president during the 1950-51 school year, and is presently training for the ministry at Concordia Seminary in St. Louis. Dr. Rasmussen is the well-known, well-liked dean of Dana College.

Vern Simonsen's article which recently appeared in his column "Stable Facts" in the Hermes is reprinted on page 8. Vern, a senior, comes to Dana from Redvers, Sask., Canada. Miss Elja McCullough, instructor in elementary education, contributed the article on page 9, and Phil Pagel, Poy Sippi, Wis., frosh, is again in charge of our sports column.

The other night I had a "lovely" dream. . . Dana's campus had grown from five buildings to more than a dozen. I was lost in a maze of wild enthusiasm; new students surging on the Registrar's office to gain admission; old grads returning with pockets bulging . . . money, of course, to rehabilitate Old Main . . . to build a new science hall, auditorium, field house, and a beautiful chapel to crown the crest of the hill. I'm going to dream that dream over again . . . They say that if you dream enough, and think enough about a thing that it's bound to happen.

Best wishes for a blessed Easter season from your Alumni executives, and the editors of the Alumni,

AND WITH THE ALUMNI

DANA ENROLLMENT DROPS SLIGHTLY SECOND SEMESTER . . .

Final enrollment figures show a net drop of ten students in full-time study for the second semester, with no change in the number of part-time students. This is a 4.5 per cent drop as compared with a normally expected 5 per cent drop in the first semester enrollment figures.

Of the full-time students registering in September, twenty-one either withdrew during the semester or did not re-enroll for the second semester. Eleven other full time students were admitted at the beginning of this semester.

Full-time student enrollment stands at 210 for the second semester; twelve part-time students added to this number makes a total of 222 enrolled, not counting those in evening, special, or correspondence courses.

Mrs. Cora Rasmussen Becomes New Dean of Women . . .

Mrs. Cora Rasmussen, Dana's new Dean of Women, assumed her duties January 19, in the absence of Miss Elja McCullough who is presently doing graduate work at Omaha University. Mrs. Rasmussen, wife of the late Alfred Rasmussen, has been active in Red Cross, Welfare, and Church activities of Antelope county, Nebr. She taught five years in the public schools of Antelope and Pierce counties, before her marriage. She came to Dana from Fremont, Nebr., where she was engaged in Welfare work.

Senior Class to Present 'H.M.S. Pinafore' March 17 & 18 . . .

On March 17 and 18, the senior class of Dana College will present 'H.M.S. Pinafore," or "The Lass That Loves a Sailor," an operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan, in the College Auditorium.

Appearing in the second annual operetta will be Vern Simonsen, Redvers, Sask., Canada; LaVerne Nielsen, Blair; Dick Jensen, Fremont, Nebr., Gaylen Hafar, Cedar Falls, Ia.; Jon Petersen, Jacksonville, Ia.; Shirley Andersen, McNabb, Ill.; Joan Petersen, Exira, Ia.; and Kathy Nielsen, Minden, Nebr.

Choral work is under the direction of senior Paul Jorgensen, Blair, with Prof. Gerald Hatt in charge of leads and small groups. Phil Kaldahl, Oaks, Okla.; Elva Jensen, Upton, Wyo.; Lyle Kohler, Tru-fant, Mich.; and Joyce Hayek, Hartland, Wis., head important committees in charge of the production. Costumes are by Theodore Lieben and Son of Omaha.

Entrance Marker Will Be Possible Senior Gift . . .

Seniors have tentatively decided to construct an entrance marker on the northeast corner of the lawn of Old Main as the 1953 class gift. "Several designs by students are under consideration," Mark Thomsen, Denmark, Wis., president of the class stated. Either stone or brick will be used, with the name of the college and seminary prominently displayed. Night-time illumination is also planned.

Dana Has Many Guests During School Year . . .

During the school year Dana and Trinity entertain many distinguished guests of many different vocations. Some of them are guest lecturers and chapel speakers, while others have been here for reasons of business.

A partial list includes: Dr. Kiyoshi Hirai, president of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Japan; Rev. George Robertson, Royal, Ia.; and Dr. E. W. Mueller, Chicago, Ill., Spiritual Emphasis Days speakers; Rev. Viggo Bagger, missionary to India; Dr. Jens Rosenkjaer, head of the lecture department of the Danish State Radio; Maya Winther, missionary to Japan; Rev. M. C. Hagedorn, Detroit, Mich., president of the UELC Luther League; Dr. Oscar Anderson, ELC Luther League president, Minneapolis, Minn.; Dr. Wilton E. Bergstrand, Augustana Luther League president, Minneapolis, Minn., and other leaders of National Luther League organizations.

Among those appearing in concert at the College auditorium was Miss Ellen Gilberg, world renowned Danish pianist. The National Music League Trio, and the piano duo of Nelson and Neal have appeared under the sponsorship of the Blair Civic Concert Association, to which all students belong. The Enchanted Strings, a female string orchestra, will appear in the near future.

"Easter" To Be Junior Class Production . . .

"Easter" by August Strindberg, noted Scandinavian playwright, will be presented by the Junior Class April 17 and 18. The presentation will mark one of the first presentations of the drama in the United States, if not the American premiere.

John Nielsen, Dean of Men, is the director in charge. Only members of the Junior Class will appear in the play.

Hal Cole Award Established By Fine Arts-Literary Club

A new award, the Hal Evans Cole Memorial Award, has been established by the Fine Arts-Literary Club to be given to the contributors of the two most outstanding features appearing in the Sower. The awards have been established for a period of five years, and will be presented at commencement exercises each spring.

The Langland Award, which has been presented to the contributors of the best prose and poetry each year by a former Dana professor, will again be awarded. The four awards will not conflict, since the Hal Cole Award is designed more for the contributors of critical writing and essays, art work, and photography.

Dr. Ethan Mengers Is Studying in the East . . .

Dr. Ethan Mengers, Professor of Old Testament in Trinity Seminary, is presently studying at Boston University. His course of study consists mostly of theology. His proposed curriculum was to contain study of the Old Testament, and the Aramaic language.

He will remain all summer, returning to Dana for the 1953-54 school year. Mrs. Mengers accompanied the professor.

Gift Packages Sent To Dana Servicemen . . .

The servicemen's committee, a student project, has completed gift packages to former Danians stationed in Korea and Europe. The packages were made up from the gifts of money and food given at the Christmas banquet.

The committee has also been writing informal letters to the servicemen concerning the school activities and including religious tracts. The committee plans to make all addresses available to students in the near future. They also plan to continue the letter writing and to send packages to those stationed in the States should the funds be made available.

Servicemen are already receiving copies of the Hermes, and the Alumni Quarterly.

MEMORIAL CHIMES INSTALLED

On the cover of this issue four students are seen around the new chimes installation in the third floor office of the Student Council in Old Main. Beginning with Dick Andersen, Kansas City senior holding the record, they are: Ann Harms, Logan, Ia., junior; Jack Allen, Greenville, Mich., junior; and Jim Thomse, Denmark, Wis., freshman. The inset shows one of the two trumpet speakers located in the tower, which makes the chimes audible in downtown Blair.

Presented in memory of the four students who died last year, Bonnie Dealy, Hal Cole, Peggy Kinion, and Jean States, the amplifying system was dedicated at special chapel services February 2. Recordings of chimes are played before every morning chapel service.

The Memorial Book Shelf in the Library is growing with the acquisition of many new books. The fund for this project came mostly from friends and relatives of the three students who were killed in the auto accident December 22, 1951.

PHIL PAGEL

The other day the editor came in and told me it was time for the Alumni to go to press again and therefore it was also time for another summary of the sports events here on College Hill.

Basketball is over and it has really been a very exciting and successful year. With only two lettermen returning to this year's squad, hopes were not too bright but the new members came through in fine style to put the Vikings in second place in the Conference. By coming out with a 10-10 mark, the Vikes greatly improved last year's poor record of 7-15.

There were several exciting and very close games during the season, one being with Midland and the other with York. In the early part of the year the Vikings were defeated by the Midland Warriors in a heartbreaker game 68-67. However, the Vikings made up for this loss by turning the tables and defeating the Warriors in a later tussle 96-89.

The conference coaches recently announced the all-conference squad for 1953.

Tarkio, first in the conference, captured three places while both Dana and York each got one. Danas' Fritz Youra was the only freshman among the players. Besides being chosen for the all-conference squad, Fritz led the Vikings in point production while "Franny" Morrow followed in second place.

Besides the regular games, there was also a great deal of activity centered around the intramural games and the WAA team. The intramural tournament was under the direction of Neil Moore and came to a close last week with the Seminary team taking first place. The WAA girls have also made a splendid showing by challenging and defeating quite a number of girls basketball teams in this area.

All in all this year's season has been a very exciting one as well as very successful. But now it is time to look forward to the spring sports—by the way Coach Peterson predicts that this year's track team has the potentiality of being one of Dana's best.

HERE'S REASON ENUF

WHY DANA? . .

ART SIMON

1950-51 STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

"Why Dana and not some other school?" That's the question we all must have asked ourselves at one time, and the question which we must in turn help others to answer, if they are to reap the same joys we have reaped.

I write this at the risk of being boringly trite, of rehashing old stuff. But the issue is basic, unavoidable. I'll eliminate state schools from consideration for the purpose of brevity and assume that the question is, "Why Dana and not some other church college?"

Since recruiting students is largely on a person-to-person basis, it is well to consider individually the factors that attracted us to Dana; and now, as we look back upon our college years, the factors that should attract others. Consider my situation for a moment.

I didn't come to Dana because of her scholastic standing. This is not to minimize its importance, for Dana has many things to be proud of scholastically, and better, she is growing in this vein. Nevertheless, scholarship was not my chief concern.

It was not athletics . . . of necessity I restricted my joys to the rooting section. It was not the Choir. I was over-awed upon hearing Dana's choir for the first time, but felt that my chances of singing in it were too slight to risk attendance at Dana for that reason. Although now I count the hours spent under Director Neve among my most memorable.

Nor was it the closely knit fellowship and social life for which Dana is justly proud. I got a good taste of this from a visit one evening during "Open House" festivities, and from several other contacts with Dana students. But it was only a taste, for this fellowship is not something to observe, but experience. Nor was I quite aware of the opportunities for leadership training in these activities.

It wasn't even Dana's spiritual vigor, although I entered with great expectations and was not disappointed, for this Christ-centered living—the backbone of Dana—played an influential part in causing me to switch my vocational aims and study for the ministry.

I say it wasn't any of the above reasons which made me decide on Dana. It wasn't any of them, it was all of them—all of them plus an intangible something which combines to produce that distinctively wonderful Dana spirit. And this is what we have to pass along to prospective Danians.

Calculating all the merits and demerits and granting that Dana ranks with the best, still it is possible that some other, though few, Christian colleges could honestly make almost identical claims, item for item. Perhaps it is as if you had fallen in love. You know you have the best girl in the world. If the impossible would happen and for a moment you could stand coldly on the sidelines and examine her, characteristic by characteristic, and so compare these characteristics with those of other wonderful girls, perhaps you would be compelled to admit that you couldn't objectively prove that she is the best. You just know it. Taking her as she is and as you have grown to love her, you know it!

. . CHURCH SCHOOLS

DR. ELMER RASMUSSEN
DEAN OF DANA COLLEGE

The old question as to the value of an education in a church college compared with an education in a tax-supported university is still with us, and the basic question is still the same in spite of many changes that are taking place. That basic question is: What do you want from college? The answers given by these two kinds of institutions differ, and probably always will, even though both have education as a common purpose. But changes that are taking place keep the question before us.

One of these changes is that tax-supported institutions are becoming more aggressive in seeking students. They are advertising in ways they have not used before, and to a much greater extent than formerly. Many states have established branches of the university or junior colleges in many of the larger cities throughout the state to overcome the distance problem and to serve as a kind of preparatory school for advanced work at the university. These are expanded services of quite recent development that affect the problem of the choice of a college.

Also professional colleges of the universities that have in the past specialized most in the training given their students are gradually requiring more and more general education of the kind normally found in church colleges. An important element of such general education is the study of the values of life found in the areas of philosophy and religion. More of the universities, under some pressure from Protestant groups, are also offering credit or non-credit courses in religion; and a few are requiring such courses in their college of liberal arts. But the development of Christian life cannot logically be an incidental matter; if it is to be effective it must be a basic part of the entire life of the college and of the student.

In a real sense of the word, a college becomes a "second home" for the student in his transition from the guidance of the home to full maturity and independence. For it is in the college that the larger number of students begin to really make their own decisions. These, then, are formative years, years in which the basic pattern of life becomes established. The influences that play on a person in those years are highly significant.

In a church college, the Christian way of life is ever present. Time is taken for the study of God's Word. Group devotions are a part of daily life. Students find many activities in which they express their Christian convictions in song, in word, and in deed. Fellow students encourage each other in Christian faith and life by word and by example. The faculty is positively Christian and adds its influence to the whole atmosphere of the college.

And these influences endure. Dr. Erland Nelson, formerly President of Dana College and now Professor of Psychology at the University of South Carolina, has studied the relationship between the religious attitudes of the same persons fourteen years later. Those attitudes held and developed during the college years were remarkably lasting, and had gone on to bear fruit.

For those who believe the Christian life to be a matter of importance to their sons and daughters, the church college must still be considered best. While the church college cannot guarantee that all who come to them will grow in the Christian life, it still provides the best place for a young man or woman away from home to be encouraged to grow into responsible Christian adulthood.

THANKS TO SENTIMENT

Old Main Still Stands . . .

VERN SIMONSEN
1953 DANA SENIOR

A visitor at our college invariably asks about the convent-like structure which is located in the center of our campus. We politely inform him that this building is the center of our campus with the auditorium, Pioneer Memorial, Men's Hall, and Ladies' Hall "scattered" around it. Because of its position and its age, we call this building Old Main. He again inquires about how this structure has been able to remain standing for so many years. We bluntly state "sentiment is all that holds up Old Main." He is puzzled, but we aren't.

Old it is, and Main it shall remain. Admittedly the students at times use this building for purposes for which it had not originally been intended, but somehow this structure has a most significant place in the beginning of Dana College. Though it sways in the breeze today, it was a mighty structure when your grandfather attended it some fifty years ago. Where did your grandfather live in the dorm when he was here? Maybe it's where "Lightnin" (Jim Nielsen, senior, from Albert Lea, Minn.) has his Hermes office. Maybe where "Hummingbird" (Bob Hemmingsen, senior from Racine, Wis.) executes his presidential responsibilities, or perhaps it is where George (George Demant, senior seminarian from Sturtevant, Wis. He has been the students' barber for several years) "trims the mops" or "lowers the ears." We aren't sure, but we do know that your grandfather studied beside a "pot-bellied" stove learning theories in sciences which have now been discredited. He learned many facts which are today untruths. Nevertheless, when he looked heavenwards, his understanding was at least as great as ours today.

He didn't worry as much about social activities as we do, and many are now complaining for fear they lose some of the social graces which took them so long to develop. We cannot pass judgment, but our works must not control the way of our mind. There is something unique about Old Main, for the vigorous sentiment that "holds it up" can be found when we attend chapel in the aged structure. A personal longing, not a college requirement, causes us to attend so we receive that felt need.

The singing in the canteen, the arguments during coffee time, the music of the choir practice and the many classes in that physically deteriorating structure keep it alive. Sentiment keeps it standing, but the principles for which it was built are the guiding lights which makes Dana College that which it is today.

—Hermes

POSTSCRIPTUM

ART SIMON

"Juvenile delinquency is not actually a youth problem, but a parent problem; if the parents are on the job, the children will pose as no great problem. And maybe to some extent a similar thing is true of us in regard to student recruitment. I mean that it is as much an 'alumni problem' as it is a 'new student problem.' For if we former Danians are on the job—and what a responsibility we have!—student recruitment will become less and less a problem."

ALL ABOARD! FOR

. . A College on Wheels!

MISS ELJA McCULLOUGH
INSTRUCTOR IN ELEMENTARY EDUCATION

Walter Winchell once quoted Beatrice Lillie as saying to a steward on the liner Queen Mary: "What time does this place arrive in New York?" Somewhat the same type of question might be used in reference to Dana College this summer for a portion of it is to go on wheels down through the states south of us to Mexico City, thence to the western coast of the United States. From San Francisco this college on tour will "about face" and wheel along the highways of Nevada, Utah and Wyoming toward the home site.

The trip will be made mostly by chartered Greyhound bus except in Mexico where Mexican transportation must be used. The total time is expected to cover twenty-four days and will begin at the Omaha Greyhound Bus Depot on Tuesday, July 28, 1953.

The instructor of the course in social science and the conductor of the tour will be the Elementary Education teacher at Dana, Miss Elja McCullough who has made teacher tours in August a hobby for several years. This year's tour is to be sponsored jointly by Dana College and the Omaha Municipal University. Teachers may earn college credit while on vacation enjoying new sights and new friends.

Points of interest enroute will be largely those of Spanish, Mexican and Indian influence and culture. The Alamo and Mission of San Jose at San Antonio, will start the "sights" and from Laredo, Texas, the travelers will pass through Mexico's semi desert, tropical valleys and wonderfully scenic mountains on the way to Mexico City. They will see cacti, corn, sugar cane, citrus fruits and tropical flowers, and will note a variety of customs and phases of life among the people.

In and near Mexico City there will be Chapultepec Castle, the National Museum, the largest cathedral in America, the floating gardens of Xochimilco, pyramids larger than those of Egypt and Taxco's ancient narrow cobbled streets. Mexico is an area of exciting contrasts in an age of old customs with modern trends.

The tour will leave Mexico at El Paso and proceed through Tucson and El Centro to San Diego, thence north as far as San Francisco and back to Nebraska by way of Salt Lake City. Teachers especially will find time and money well spent in taking such a course. Anyone interested should immediately contact either Dana College or Omaha University for further information. The cost for transportation and lodging is unusually economical and inviting. One may either take the full course or pay the usual audit fee charged by the College.

MALE GLEE CLUB ON TOUR . . .

The Dana Male Glee Club, under the direction of a senior, Don Olsen, will leave for a weekend trip to Wisconsin on April 16. The Glee Club will sing at William Horlick and Washington Park high schools in Racine on Friday, April 17. The Glee Club hopes to appear on radio the following day. Sunday will be the climax of the trip when they sing at Emmaus Lutheran Church and Our Saviour's Lutheran Church during the morning worship services. Full concerts will be presented at Immanuel's Lutheran Church and Gethsemane Lutheran Church in the afternoon and evening.

The Glee Club will stop for dinner enroute to Racine at our church in Cedar Falls. The group will appear at the local high school in the afternoon and the church in the evening on the return trip.

The Dana Male Glee Club has made many appearances in high schools around Nebraska and western Iowa in recent years.

Publicity . . . all kinds of it goes out to prospective students to interest them in a college career at our Alma Mater . . . Dana College. View books and catalogues; letters by the dozens; personal interviews and visits to the campus; off campus trips by our field representatives; Choir tours and Male Glee Club concerts in local high schools, athletic trips, press releases . . . But above all of these forms of publicity, WE, the alumni, are the most important. We have experienced life at Dana. We know what a Christian college education can mean in the development of our lives. It is up to us to pass these experiences on to the new high school graduates . . . to give them years of rich development in a school we know to be equipped and prepared to meet the needs of young Christian men and women.
