

Board Adopts First Million-Dollar Budget, Okays Building Project

Liberal Arts Grads in Demand

This may be the era of specialization but the graduate of a liberal arts college remains in high demand.

That appraisal came from Fred B. Leighton, vice-president of Cornell, Ia., College.

He said his college's graduates who plan to enter business average more than five job offers. Business people, he said, are looking for "individuals with a broad-range background."

More and more liberal arts college graduates are venturing into graduate schools. Now 45 per cent of men and 30 per cent of women from Cornell are taking post-graduate study, Mr. Leighton said.

"It seems to be the only direction to go with today's knowledge being so fragmented and so technical," he said, pointing out that "the college diploma of today is roughly equivalent to the high school diploma of 20 years ago."

It is possible, he said, that 20 years from now young America will consider a master's degree as essential as today's bachelor of arts.

If this is to be a part of education in the future, the small private college must find some way to keep from pricing itself out of the market, Mr. Leighton said.

He estimated it costs an average of 22 hundred dollars to send a student through one year of college at schools like Cornell, which belong to the Midwest Conference. The conference includes 10 liberal arts colleges from four Midwestern states.

Dana's Board of Regents, meeting on campus, adopted a tentative operating budget of $1,031,000 for the next school year and authorized first steps toward construction of a Campus Center building.

The budget represents an increase of 90 thousand dollars over the allocation for the academic year just ended. It is the first million-dollar budget Dana has ever had.

The budget action and construction authorization were only two of several steps taken by the Regents that are regarded as important to the future expansion of the college.

The board directed the administration and faculty to prepare specific, long-range plans for a 10-year projection of enrollment, budget, academic program, faculty, buildings and facilities.

This plan is to be completed in time for consideration at the next board meeting in October.

The board directed the administration to proceed immediately to engage architectural services and obtain preliminary plans and costs for the Campus Center.

The building will house dining facilities, book store, coffee shop, faculty lounge, conference and meeting rooms. There is a possibility that some of the activities

Alumni Elect Leo Kirchoff

Leo Kirchoff, elementary school principal at Blair, is the new vice-president of the Alumni Association.

He took office immediately upon election, succeeding Tom Langefeld of Omaha, whose term had expired.

The alumni office reported a disappointingly low vote in the election. Only 22 of Dana's three thousand alumni took the trouble to mail in ballots.

Seven Class Reunions Slated For Homecoming October 16-18

Homecoming plans are afoot.

Class reunions have been announced for classes of 1904, 1914, 1924, 1934, 1944, 1954 and 1964. These classes will be honored during the week-end program.

The alumni office is seeking representatives from these classes to help with arrangements. Anyone willing to work with the Homecoming Committee on reunion plans should write or call the college.

Homecoming is October 16-18.

Other events are expected to be announced soon.

now centered in Borup Coliseum would be transferred to the new building.

The structure probably will be built on the hillside just to the northwest of Viking Field. It would be another in the chain of new improvements ringing the large, open mall in front of Mickelsen Hall.

"Campus Center" has not been settled upon as the final name for the new building.

College officials said it is hoped that sufficient financing can be found to enable construction to begin in 1965.

The Regents also approved contracts for all administrative personnel and faculty members for the coming school year.

All faculty members except one will return next fall. Roger Welsch, instructor in German, has resigned to accept a similar position at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln.

Contracts

Contracts also were approved for three additions to the faculty.

They are Dr. Delvyn Hutton in Religion, Roger Olson in Mathematics and Miss Donna Byriel in Women's Physical Education and Social Activities.

Authorization also was given to engage an administrative assistant to President Madsen or an assistant in the field of fund-raising. This position has not yet been filled.

Promotions

These faculty promotions were approved:

Miss Luella Nielsen to the rank of associate professor and Paul Emmerich, Bernard Mathies and Donald Warman to assistant professor.

Tenure was granted to Dr. Clifford Hanson and Kenneth Tiahr. Mr. Tiahr will be on leave of absence next year to do graduate work.

Nominations were made for members of the board.

Nominees are Miss Margaret Fischer, Omaha attorney; Pastor Niels Carlsson of Pasadena, Cal.; Harold Miller of Omaha and Joe Lindholm of Audubon, Ia.

Election of Regents will take place at the meeting of the Dana College Corporation, which meets in conjunction with the biennial convention of The American Lutheran Church in October.

Worship

Other board action included approval of a request from a student committee that Sunday worship services be held on campus this spring and next fall.

5 Students Win Honors

Campus winners of literary awards were announced at the annual honors convocation.

Ken Jacobsen's translation into German of "The Village Blacksmith" won the Kaj Munk Memorial Award for translations.

Judi Briggs was given the Hal Cole award for creative composition for her cover of "The Sower."

The Langland Awards for prose and poetry went to Pam Berber, Richard Jorgensen and Wayne Morton.

100 Students At Clinic Session

About one hundred high school music students from the Blair area took part in the instrumental division of the Melchior Music Festival held at Dana in April.

The American Woodwind Quintet from Indiana University appeared as guest artists. The quintet presented an evening concert and met with individual students during clinic sessions in the afternoon.

Oakland Postmaster Job To Myron Christensen

President Lyndon Johnson has announced the appointment of Myron Christensen, Dana alumnus, as postmaster at Oakland, Neb.

The appointment has gone to the Senate for approval.

Mr. Christensen attended Dana one semester in 1942. He has been living in Oakland and serving as Burt County Clerk and is a past member of the Burt County Board of Supervisors.

Denver Speech

Dana President Madsen spoke at an April dinner meeting at First Bethany Church for Denver-area students who have enrolled as freshmen at Dana for the 1964-65 year.

New Publication

Dana students have received free copies of the new American Lutheran Church colleges magazine, "Dimensions 12."

It replaces "College Clippings," a periodic publication of clippings from ALC college newspapers.

The pilot issue featured articles about student government, sports, entertainment, sports, editorial concerns and religious activities.

Carol Hundtofte

Mrs. Verner Hundtofte of Blair, the former Carol Lynne Schjodt, died at her home in May.

A substitute teacher in the Blair schools, she was a Blair High School graduate and attended Dana. Her husband is an instructor at North Elementary School in Blair.

Work Accepted

Beverly N. Larsen, Class of 1963, of Elk Horn, Ia., has received word that her manuscript, "The Many Names of Jesus," has been accepted for publication by the Augsburg Publishing House, Minneapolis.

Publication will be this fall.

Mrs. Larsen is teaching kindergarten in the Irwin, Ia., schools.

Liberal Arts List Chosen

Eight books are on the list for next year's Liberal Arts Reading Program at Dana.

They are:

"The Last Days of Socrates," Plato; "Fathers and Sons," Ivan Turgenev; "A Letter Concerning Toleration," John Locke; "Lord of the Flies," William Golding; "The Revolt of the Masses," Jose Ortega Y Gasset; "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Other Favorites," Lewis Carroll; "Richard III," Shakespeare, and "The Human Use of Human Beings," Norbert Wiener.

Danians Spruce Up Chapel

A new altar setting has been provided for chapel services in Alumni Memorial Auditorium.

Members of the technical crew of the Dana Players, campus theatrical organization, constructed a portable chapel set which was used for the first time at Parents Day services.

It consists of a paneled back in Philippine mahogany, a new altar and lectern.

The altar and lectern were designed by the Rev. F. W. Thomsen, art professor. He also did the painting behind the altar.

Fred Lange, sophomore from Racine, Wis., designed the stained glass window effects at the sides of the altar and a dove with an olive leaf on the front of the lectern.

Denver Club Picks Slate

The Rev. Emory Petersen has been elected president of the Denver Dana Club for 1964.

Other new officers:

The Rev. Norlan Hansen, vice-president; Carol E. Petersen, secretary; Ed Harboe, treasurer; E. V. Morton, recruiting chairman, and Mrs. Edna Vance and Mrs. Lillian Healey, program co-chairmen.

The election was at a business meeting and coffee hour held at Holy Shepherd Lutheran Church in Denver. The Rev. Richard L. Schlack was host pastor.

About 30 members were present to discuss adoption of a constitution, elect officers and hear a report by Mr. Morton, the outgoing president, on the club's recruiting program for students in Colorado.

Excerpts were read from the consultation report by the North Central Committee on Accreditation.

NSF Aid For Dana

Dana has been awarded a special grant of $7,750 by the National Science Foundation in Washington.

It is to be matched with an equal amount from college funds, making a total of 15 thousand dollars available to the Science Department.

According to Dr. C. A. Christiansen, academic dean, the grant will be used to purchase laboratory equipment for use in teaching new courses scheduled to be added to the science curriculum.

The first course, Biological Methods, will be introduced during the 1964-65 academic year.

Dr. Christiansen said:

"The addition of new courses will better prepare Dana graduates for graduate school in biology, teaching in secondary schools and careers in the medical sciences by giving them an introduction to the methods, techniques and instruments used in experimental research biology as well as a broader background in the area of cytology, cell physiology and biochemistry."

Association Fetes Grads at Banquet

The Alumni Association's annual dinner for graduating seniors was held at the Birchwood Club in Omaha May 19.

President Madsen, Phil Pagel and Alumni Vice-President Leo Kirchoff spoke.

Dana Trying Separate Student Congregation

Dana has grown large enough to have its own, separate church congregation—at least on a trial basis.

Beginning May 3, Sunday worship services were being held in Alumni Memorial Auditorium, with Campus Pastor John Nielsen officiating.

Authorization for the services came from the Board of Regents at its spring meeting on campus.

Tim Jensen, a member of the student committee which asked the Regents for the authorization, had these comments:

"A student congregation, long talked, thought and prayed about as a possible means of improving our religious life, is no longer just a vague idea.

"Although the services are Lutheran oriented, all students, regardless of their denominational affiliation, are more than welcome to attend and participate.

"Many students already are involved in this new venture in our religious program. Arrangements for the chancel furniture of Alumni Memorial Auditorium, music, bulletins, publicity, ushering and other matters are being made almost solely by students.

"Therefore it is upon the measure of students involved and their concern that the congregation will live or die.

"The opportunity for a new and greater understanding of the church now lies before us."

Danians' Dateline: Nigeria

Here is another report from former Dana instructor Sieghard Krueger and his wife, Brenda, a 1963 graduate, who are on a two-year Peace Corps assignment in Nigeria.

We finished our first term of teaching at the Women's Training College, and decided to go out into the bush and teach as a vacation project. We chose the village of Monguno, 74 miles from Maiduguri and a 3½-hour ride by Land-rover over a sandy trail.

The village is fairly large but no one knows the population. Almost everyone lives in grass huts, which are really of fine craftsmanship and last from seven to 10 years.

At the peak of the roof sits an ostrich egg or if they're not lucky enough to have an egg, an empty beer bottle turned upside down. They have a school, a dispensary, some district offices and a market.

Fist Shaking

Market day is Saturday and that is the only day of the week that school is closed. Camel caravans and loaded donkeys come too in great numbers and by the middle of the day the Monguno parking lot looks like the Omaha Crossroads lot except that camels and donkeys are substituted for cars.

Sieg and I always attract a good deal of attention in the market, and if we stop to buy 14 cents worth of peanuts we may attract a crowd of 25. The people are friendly as well as curious and shake their fists at us. We smile and shake a fist at them. (Fist shaking is a friendly greeting here.)

The senior primary school is a seven-year school with about 275 students, three times as many boys as girls. On Sunday, the last period of the day is reserved for clothes washing. Monday morning is inspection morning and everyone must have had a bath and be wearing his clean clothes.

That morning is a comical sight. There is a water outlet right across the road and you see children get under it for their bath, then run for school, soaking wet and putting on their clothes as they go.

Soccer Stars

In the late afternoon there are games of soccer, volleyball, and basketball for the boys. Soccer is their main sport and they can really handle that ball with their feet. Athletic Sieg joined the team one day but couldn't seem to send the ball in the right direction.

A week after we arrived we had a field trip to Lake Chad. The teachers on horseback and 75 children on foot trudged 12 miles to a small fishing village near the lake and arrived after four hours, tired, thirsty and sunburned (the latter applies to Sieg and me).

Sieg and I were given a private compound in the village, complete with grass hut, a pot of water and mats to sit on.

Grass Hut

On a Saturday morning we called on the district head in his grass hut and as a gesture of kindness he gave us police protection. We usually slept outside because it's considerably cooler, but that night a terrific sandstorm came up, forcing us inside. We had shaken the sand out of the bedding, dusted ourselves off and had gone to sleep when suddenly there was a light shining in our faces. Our policeman had arrived.

Five nights later he came again and was back the two following nights, so we ended up with four nights of protection.

After three and a half weeks we returned to Maiduguri. It seems good to be able to sit at a table again when we eat and to have cold water to drink, but we're happy that we were able to have our "bush" experience.

Viking Team Evens Mark

Coach Dale Lemon's Viking baseball team finished the season even up with an 8-8 record.

Pitcher Jim Jorgenson of Des Moines won seven games in a row. He lost two. He gave up only 14 walks in 62 innings and compiled an earned-run average of 1.58.

Top hitters were Marlow Remmers, .324, Ken Quirk, .314 and Tim Brown, .306.

Season results, with Dana's score first:

From the Editors

Our man in Katmandu is coming through, but not as soon as we told you.

Peace Corpsman Larry Dornacker, who was to write a feature for a spring issue of The Review, reported he won't be able to complete it, and its accompanying pictures of Nepal life, until his return this summer.

One Issue Remaining

There will be just one more issue of The Review before a two-month summer break.

If you have any news that won't keep until the September edition, send it in now for the June number.

The Dana Folk Dancers appeared before an audience estimated at 35 hundred late in April.

They were the featured entertainment at the 1964 Ak-Sar-Ben Square Dance Festival in Omaha.
