Sherer Nonsense . . .

Prominent World Figures Agree to Abolish Final Exams

Every year about this time somebody starts a campaign to do away with semester finals. Now there's a worthy cause. Exams make for cramming.

They get on people's nerves. They keep seniors and juniors home on Friday nights (sophomores and freshmen are eligible too, but most of them don't stay home anyway).

To support the contention that finals are worthless, here are portions taken from selected speeches and writings of some of the world's leaders...

Charles De Gaulle: "...I am not only totally and unchangeably against the idea, but I defy those thinking otherwise to defend the opposite view. I could care less what other nations think..."

John Kennedy: "...Such things belong in the past. But we must look to the futchah to build a greatah America with vigah and powah and ..."

Former Canadian Premier John Diefenbaker: "...They make us look inferior and undermine our national pride. I thought I made it clear in the last election that ..."

Mao Tse Tung: "...This is no time for cowardice and timidity. They should be destroyed utterly and completely without a moment's hesitation. As soon as China gets the H-bomb..."

Richard Nixon: "...I'm very glad you asked me that question, because this is something that every American should be concerned about. And in this connection let me say this: I'm proud to be in a free nation where we can be concerned about things of this nature and ..."

Negro James Meredith: "...It isn't the idea of the thing so much as the people who support it. They are narrow and short-sighted and are bringing grief to everyone including themselves."

Barry Goldwater: "...It is amazing to me that we haven't fought this thing head-on in the past. It's a creeping sort of institution that spreads and swallows everything in its path. Now, maybe I'm too conservative, but ..."

By Way of Bob

Congratulations are in order to the May Fest Royalty: Gary Lebeck, King and Judy Swenson, Queen; Everitt Petersen and Julie Sanderson, Arden Dorn and Joan Nielsen, attendants.

A great deal of hard work and effort went into this May Fest as was evidenced by the beautiful decorations in the recreation room of Borup Coliseum and in the dining hall. Credit for this goes to the seniors to whom a word of thanks is also due.

In the first edition of this year's Hermes, this column carried the statement, "Getting off to a good start is very important because for every student with spark there are a dozen with ignition trouble." Did you get off to a good start or didn't you even really get started at all?

Regardless of what your answer is to the above question, it is nonetheless true that someone has his foot on the accelerator because this year has really moved (in a forward direction, we hope!).

Now before finals get underway, stop for just five minutes to catch your breath and take a quick resume of the past nine months; because if you don't do it now, you surely won't after summer begins. Ask yourself what you accomplished, what you learned (no one, positively no one, can go to school for nine months without learning at least something).

Without a doubt, there are many highlights which stand out in everyone's mind, some to be remembered, some to be forgotten. In any case, this year, as I see it, has been a very full, rewarding and wonderful year—the best since I've been here. Each year seems to be better than the previous one. So in light of that, we can look forward to another year with many new and exciting events.

Now as I draw this column to a close for the last time, may I wish all of you a happy and pleasant summer. To those of you returning next year: hurry back! And to those not returning: we'll miss you

Bob Rademacher

Newsnotes From Student Council

Dear Fellow Students

Last Thursday at Student Council, Thern Kaldahl presented the revisions to the Student Body Constitution which were approved by the Council. These revisions were made to better define our constitution and the duties vested to the Student Council.

Our social co-chairmen were appropriated $20 with which to purchase an FM radio tuner to be installed in the canteen.

The pep club asked to be officially disbanded by the Student Council and was granted this request. In connection with this, a committee was set up including pep club officers, cheerleaders, D-Club members and the social co-chairmen to determine the future of our cheerleading squad which has been under the pep club.

On behalf of the student body the Council appropriated $30 with which to buy gifts for the editors of our campus publications. They will be personally thanked by Herb Knudsen, past student body president, at the Senior Convocation Friday morning.

Tonight's Council meeting will bring student body business to a close for this school year. On the agenda will be a presentation of Freshmen initiation plays by Ken Kemmish, an end-of-the-year report for HERMES by Bob Rademacher and a presentation of the suggestions made by the pep club committee. Minutes to this meeting will be posted on the canteen bulletin board.

I wish you all a healthful and prosperous summer and look forward to working with you in student government next year. Until then let us continue to pray for one another.

Sincerely,
Tom Lange

The shield and spear are gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hagberg and the fan is a gift to Dr. Madsen from the chief of Ned's tribe.

Artifacts From Tanganyika On Display in Reading Room

Adorning the east wall of the library reading room are a spear and a shield, gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hagberg, missionaries to Tanganyika. Mr. and Mrs. Hagberg are both Dana graduates, 1958 and 1956, respectively.

The shield is made from the skin of a rhinoceros. Its usefulness is, the same as for most shields, to ward off spears and arrows ("not bullets," interjects Ned). Spears, such as the one above the shield, can not penetrate the thick skin, even though they are razor sharp and very pointed.

Nowadays, a goodly number of the spears, such as this one, are made commercially in East Africa and sold to the local tribes who sharpen them to their satisfaction. Ned also added that this type of spear, which can be taken apart in the center, is more for tourists and display than for actual use.

Both of these objects are used mainly by the Mossai tribe who do not accept the new ways of modern life and feel free to take cattle from other tribes, thus causing minor skirmishes which call for the use of these instruments.

The fan (held by Ned Kitomari in the above picture) a gift to Dr. Madsen from the chief of the Meru tribe from which Ned comes is also on display with the spear and shield. The fan, "simanjiro" in Ned's tribal tongue, is a status symbol used by the older people of the tribes. Its chief useful function is to keep the flies off one's body.

The fan is made from the tail hair of a mule. The beads on the handle are commercially made in East Africa.

Ned adds that the fan is rapidly becoming a thing of the past and that one would never see a young person with one.

Speaking of the new republic of Tanganyika under the leadership of Dr. Julius Nyerere, Ned commented that the Tanganyikans don't think in terms of tribes as much as they used to. A great deal of nationalism has resulted in the areas of education, politics and western culture which has infiltrated the country because of the formation of this new republic in 1961.

There is, as Ned adds, "more identity of the people as one, rather than as tribal societies."

Experience is the name everyone gives to his mistakes.

Something To Think About

By Bob Hansen

Fellow Students:

As I sit pondering over a subject for a concluding article to this column, a haunting line from the mind and pen of Robert Frost continues to engrain itself in my thoughts, — "... and I, I took the path less traveled by; and that has made all the difference."

Life truly holds many paths in which a man may walk. The roadway to a valid education is one of these. Together we have walked that route at one pace or another. Now, in our final week, the time has come to measure the distance we have traveled.

Our academic progress will be evaluated by those who have preceded us, but the investment value of the trip belongs exclusively to us, the investors. I count educational value by the questions it raises as well as the answers it provides.

I offer, then, the following list of questions to add to your list when you meditate over the successes and failures of this school year.

1. Did I gain a deeper respect for that which is unknown as well as that which has been explored?
2. Is my world a little larger because I have learned again and again to welcome the world of others?
3. Are responsibilities becoming more a privilege and less a necessity?
4. Finally, is life becoming more a realist's mission and less a mystic's vision?

Diamondmen Conclude Season With Twin Wins at Westmar

Dana ended its 1963 baseball season with a whirl by trouncing Westmar in both games of a doubleheader last Saturday, May 11. The afternoon, highlighted by a Jim Jorgensen no-hitter, saw the Vikings take both games, 6-0 and 3-1.

In the first inning of the opener, Dana showed their power in the batting box by clouting four hits, including a triple by Marc Peterson, to score five runs and take a commanding lead. Peterson went on to blank Westmar's batters, giving up only two hits and allowing no runs to score.

Jim Jorgensen pitched a no-hitter in the second game to end Dana's season with a real thriller. He also would have had a shut-out if a misunderstanding with an umpire had not arisen, allowing a runner to score.

The Vikings squeaked in three runs on their hits to take the game, 3-1. The victory gave Dana a 6-11 record for the season.

Dana Graduates Two With Honors

Each year a few seniors are made eligible by their grade point average to write Honors Papers, which enable them to graduate with honors. This year only two students wrote papers. Several others were eligible but chose not to write the papers.

Judith Mayland of Omaha, Nebraska, an English major wrote on "Par Lagerkvist" under the direction of Miss Luella K. Nielsen. She will graduate magna cum laude.

Ceva Hanson of Newman Grove, Nebraska, a psychology major wrote on "The Intellectually Gifted Child" under the supervision of Miss Elja McCulloch. She will graduate cum laude.

From now on students will be able to graduate with honors by virtue of their grade point average alone and no papers will be written.

Students Receive Graduate Awards

Jim Falksen, a senior from Albert Lea, Minnesota, has been awarded an assistantship from the Kansas State University Department of Mathematics.

The assistantship is for $2070 and will run for nine months starting on September 1, 1963. Jim has several choices in fulfilling his assistantship but is undecided about which one he will pursue.

One 1962 graduate of Dana, Peter Petersen, recently received the Gilbert Fite Award from the University of South Dakota. This award, which totals $2,500, is awarded to the outstanding graduate student and will be applied on work for a Ph.D. in history at the State University of Iowa next year.

Peter, who received a fellowship to the University of South Dakota, will receive his M.A. degree from that institution this spring.

Three Dana Students Embark On European Tour Next Fall

"To Europe we go!" is the cry raised by three students from the South Dorm. Dave Israel, Ben Talley and Jeff Asfoor leave September 12 with their first stop being Oslo, Norway.

They will spend about two months in the Scandinavian countries and then the rest of their time will be divided between Germany, Austria, Italy, Greece, Switzerland, France and England.

One definite stop will be the Winter Olympics in Austria. Things that will be regretfully missed are the October Fest in Germany, the Midnight Sun, flat tires (they plan to go by bicycle and have high hopes).

Ben and Jeff are going to make sure Dave goes to Italy. They all definitely want to go to Greece and they also plan to see the "wall."

Quotes from the three: Jeff—"The Wisconsin delegate is looking forward to some European "milk," namely Germany's LIEB-FRAUMILCH." Ben—"The party from California, "U.S.A.—is looking" Dave—"I hope to come back with a more sincere and deeper understanding of human nature."
