THE DANA MESSENGER

Vol. XLVII

Rasmussen Will Key Hopes In Tomorrow's Election

A 21-year-old junior from Lohrville, Iowa and a candidate for president of Dana's student body, Paul Rasmussen is a young man of many accomplishments and interests. He is a skilled swimmer and holds a water safety instructor's certificate. He also holds the National Rifle Association's Pro Marksman Award. An Eagle Scout, Paul has earned his Pro Deo at Patria Award.

Last summer Paul sang base with a quartet which ranked among ten best quartets in Iowa. He has been an amateur radio operator since age fourteen, and is president of the Dana College Radio Club.

His high leadership accomplishments included the presidency of his local Luther League as well as that of the Northern Iowa District Luther League. He was a class officer, a member of the student council, in the band, and mixed chorus. He served on the annual staff and participated in class plays and speech. Paul was a letterman in both football and basketball.

At Dana, Paul, a chemistry major, has consistently held an 8 Dean's List average. He is a member of Science Club, Student Council, and Student Congregation Council, besides the Amateur Radio Club. Paul also participates in Intramural sports.

You have seen some of the qualifications, interests, and background of this candidate. It is hoped these will afford some insight into knowing the person, Paul Rasmussen.

Consider now the three basic proposals from his speech Monday night.

Number 1: "I am running so that you and I can be assured that our student government proceedings will be co-ordinated and directed with the utmost responsibility and efficiency."

Number 2: "It is my hope that WE can in the coming year promote the image of this, our school, one which is growing academically and physically."

"Finally, I seek this position so that I might better be able to realize a dream which I have for our college, that being, to establish, with your full co-operation and support, a campus FM radio station, which, I believe, will be an asset from communicative, educational, and recreational standpoints."

Jensen to Receive Grad Fellowships

Timothy Jensen has recently been awarded two of the most valuable graduate fellowships granted yearly: the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and the Danforth Graduate Fellowship.

This year the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation awarded 1,408 fellowships. College professors across the continent nominated over 11,000 students last fall. Woodrow Wilson Fellows get one academic year of graduate education, with tuition and fees paid by the Foundation, a living stipend of $2,000. The graduate school they choose to attend receives an additional grant from the Foundation.

The Danforth Graduate Fellowship provides tuition and living expenses for four years of graduate study in preparation for a

Chapel Set To Be Built Over Easter

At a recent meeting of the Church Council it was decided to allow Jim Beck to build a new, permanent Chapel set at the east end of A.M.A. The plans for the set, designed by Beck, were approved by the Board of Regents. The decision to go ahead with the building of the set was made by the Council at this early date in order to allow him time to have the set completed by the end of the Easter vacation. The total cost of the set will be about $2,000. Approximately $1,000 worth of lumber has been donated by Mr. Lindholm of Audubon, Iowa. It is hoped that part of the remaining sum can be raised by the student body; after Easter, a drive will be directed by the Church Council, with the purpose of raising this money. Students will be asked to make the big sacrifice and donate, if possible, an amount somewhere between fifty cents and one dollar. The plans for the set will be on display soon.

Dan Busse to Make Election bid Friday

By now you're probably all tired of sorting through information to ferret out the bits of truth and realistic promises and emotional denials. So let it suffice to say that Dan Busse has a strong desire to be your student body president. Dan has the type of personality which enables him to talk with all kinds of people, the honesty and concern to evaluate their opinions fairly, and the energy to carry out a project once it is begun. He attends carefully to all phases of an activity. These attributes he has shown in his work here on our campus. These aspects of a candidate's personality are important, we would all agree.

Most of you are probably pretty well acquainted with his platform. It is simple, yet a spark of creativity and desire to improve the campus are tucked carefully between the lines. Dan is traveling the campus road as widely as he can this week in an attempt to explain the intricacies and foundations of his platform. If you have any questions, give him a call.

Panum Poses For Victory In Student Body Election

Mr. Paul Panum . . . not an ordinary candidate, not an ordinary man.

What drives a man to run for the office of student body president? Its glory? Its prestige? Its authority? Those who know Paul best know that he shuns these things; that his motivation is of a quite different nature. He is running for this office for one reason. Paul feels that the presidential position best affords him the opportunity to serve the total welfare of the student. He has expressed the opinion that student government should do more than provide a good social program; that is should take definite steps to widen the horizon of each student. He knows that Dana can be a good place to escape. He doesn't want it to be. Student government should, in Paul's opinion, do all it can to provide opportunities for student awareness in cultural, political and national affairs.

Mr. Panum knows how to get these things done. He is familiar with the intricacies of student government, for he has been a member of student council for two years. He knows how best to establish and maintain student-faculty relationships, for he is presently representing the students on a faculty committee.

Paul realizes that if he is elected, the student will demand much of him as a president and as a person. Similarly, he will demand much of the students. He will challenge them to think, and if need be, to change. A vote for Paul is not a vote for security; it is a vote for accomplishment.

Paul has great dreams for the kind of college Dana can become. He wants the opportunity to do what he can to make it that way. But he cannot do it alone. He needs your endorse-

R.A.B. SPEAKS OUT . . .

Second Look Is Needed

One week later and amidst a great deal of turmoil and fury, we find ourselves about ready to decide who is going to be the new student body officers.

During this week we have been able to witness things that campaigns in the past have never offered. The paper is backing a candidate for the first time and this seems to have raised a few eyebrows.

To set a few people straight, I think it would be good to point out that last fall I stated in the first issue that "Hermes" would back a candidate. Mr. Busse came to me and presented to me his platform and after hearing him I felt that his ideas were the one way Dana could reach out and become something.

Since then underground publications have come out, both signed and unsigned. In all reality this is a healthy situation because it shows a lot of people are getting involved.

The one thing that bothers me, though, is the fact that many of their claims have been founded on nothing but guess work.

Mr. Moser and Mr. Carpenter said that Dana's idea of making sure Student Council minutes were published was needless because they are brought back to the floors. What is funny is that one of these gentlemen is a member of Student Council and he should know that the members have not received the minutes until the following meeting except for a few times. So I doubt very much if many of the floors have heard the current minutes at floor meetings.

They have also brought up the subject of a debate that they claim was ignored by Dan. I hope that their memories are not so short that they have forgotten that Student Council had such a proposal before it just last week. This proposal did not have enough backing to even raise a motion that it should be implemented. Last week was the time to have proposed such an action and not Monday night when campaign week had already been planned out by all candidates concerned.

Another point that strikes me funny is that they have told us that the job of presidency will involve twenty extra hours a week. I am so glad they have told us this because otherwise we might have thought it was only a part time job. I am sure that all the candidates realize that the job entails a lot of work. No one runs for the presidency for their health.

We have also been told that it is physically impossible for the president to attend floor meetings. These ambitious young men must have tried it and failed. The truth is, however, that it hasn't been tried yet and no one can argue the merits that such a practice would have.

I was glad to hear that we already had a student union committee. I have sat in Council for a year now and for some reason none of us were aware of this. Since we don't have a student union yet, it is highly unlikely that we have an already existing committee as such. This would be a whole new committee with the sole purpose of making effective use of the student union. I might add that the administration has thought such a committee would be a good idea.

To say that Dan's chief concern is only social is like saying there are men on the moon. His feelings are that this is one phase of Dana that could stand improvement. Social does not always mean dances, parties, etc. It also means lyceum events, better communication and intermingling between students, just to name a few things.

Dan stressed keeping good professors and getting more top ones along with a stress on higher academics. These things are in great need at Dana and Dan knows that they can be accomplished with effort on the part of all.

With all that has happened this week, there still remains one fact. There is an election and it is now the time for all of us to sit down and pick the issues apart and choose the person we feel will be able to serve us and the college as well.

I urge you whatever your choice, that you get out and vote because you now have the opportunity to play a role in your future here at Dana.

Students Voice Views On Major Changes At Dana

Question of the week: "What single change would you like to see at Dana?"

Freshman girl: I would like to see the humanities course made voluntary.

Freshman boy: All students really should be more conscientious about keeping the canteen clean. After all there are trash cans in there—people might try using them.

Sophomore girl: That the administration would not concern itself with such petty things, as who broke the fire seal.

Sophomore boy: I wish that somehow the student body could become aware of and discuss important world issues. The Dana attendance at the Schlesinger lecture was proof of general student apathy.

Junior girl: Women with a specified grade point average, perhaps 7.00 should be permitted to live off campus. Dana cannot prepare people to live in society by sheltering them from it.

Junior boy: Student Council should definitely do more than hold dances and buy totebags. It could maybe clean out the pools in the park. Or find a service that could be done for the people of Blair.

Senior girl: Dr. Elmer Rasmussen has three jobs. This is not only too much work for Dr. Rasmussen, it also gives him a ridiculous amount of power over student life.

Senior boy: Dana students must realize that college is not only for fun, or a place to stay because one is not qualified for a job, or an escape from human relations and the world. College is a place to learn—not only about human relationships first hand, but about the great thoughts that men have had through the ages. One can enjoy twenty-two cases of Hamms and need not go to college. College is one of our only opportunities to learn what has been thought and how to think.

Peace Corps Shows Good Potential In Coming Years

After five years of operation, the Peace Corps—an overseas service program initiated by President Kennedy to assist foreign countries — recently celebrated its fifth anniversary with the installation of a new director, Jack Hood Vaughn.

The agency that he took over was greatly expanded from the initial body begun under the leadership of Sargent Shriver in 1961. Today some 12,000 American volunteers are working in some 46 nations throughout the world, bringing with them the dedicated service the corps was established to furnish. Largely working in Africa and South America, the corps also has workers in the Philippines and Jamaica as well as a large contingent in India.

Working as teachers, farming specialists, builders and in many other capacities, the Peace Corps members are mostly young people just out of college. It also boasts of older members such as the woman of 69 who serves as a librarian in Brazil. Many of the volunteers have discovered that they have skills far greater than those for which they were trained at home. Their ability to get along with the people of developing countries, to live with minimal conveniences and on foods they had previously never heard of are among their other qualifications.

As word of the work of the Peace Corps has spread, the demand for their services has grown. Countries where they are working ask for more of them. Some 20 other countries have requested Peace Corps aid. Some 3,000 volunteers now being trained are expected to help fill some of these demands.

Inspired by its success, other nations have come up with their own versions of a service corps and the value throughout the world of the idea advanced by the late President Kennedy has spread many fold.

There is another value that the corps is establishing. As its thousands of members return to America, they bring back an understanding of foreign nations that is important. Taking their places in American industry, education, social work and other fields, these people will be able to give their fellow-workers a perspective that will contribute to better understanding among people of the world.

When he swore in Mr. Vaughn as the new director of the Peace Corps, President Johnson declared, "No group, no organization, contributes more to the cause of peace, in my judgment, than the Peace Corps."

Anyone interested in further information about the Peace Corps may write to Peace Corps, Department of State, Washington, D. C.

Playboy On Civil Rights

(Copyright 1966 by Playboy Magazine)

A majority of U.S. college students tend to disagree with a number of the principal actions as well as proposals advocated by civil rights organizations. This is the finding of the Playboy College Opinion Survey, covering 200 campuses.

While agreeing that federal legislation is necessary to assure that jury members be selected on a nondiscriminatory basis, 63.2 percent of the students do not consider such legislation needed to declare murder or assault of a civil rights worker a federal crime.

The students take a strong stand against civil disobedience to the extent of blocking traffic, with 83.1 percent disagreeing that it is justifiable as a means to an end. Further, 79 percent are opposed to the bussing of Negro children to schools out of their neighborhoods if this is the only way to obtain school integration; and an overwhelming 94.5 percent do not agree that qualified Negro job applicants should be given preference over qualified applicants of other races as a means of speeding up equality. Moreover, 66.7 percent of the students believe that the diversity of civil rights organizations is more of a hindrance than a help to the civil rights movement as a whole; and 54.8 percent believe that the Negro civil rights leadership has, by in large, not acted wisely and responsibly in trying to achieve racial equality.

The Playboy Opinion Survey also asked the students if they considered inter-marriage as the ultimate solution to the "Racial Problem." Only 12.4 percent expressed agreement.

The Playboy College Opinion Survey, which measures opinions of both students and faculty members, is based on responses from a representative sample of approximately 1200 students from all classes, ages and backgrounds, who serve as a permanent "sounding board" in questions of current interest, and a permanent panel of 200 faculty members—one representative from each campus—comprising a wide variety of educational fields.

While the faculty polled in the Playboy Opinion Survey proportionately takes a more positive pro-civil rights stand than the students, they basically tend to agree with the position taken by them. While 75.3 percent believe that federal legislation is necessary to eliminate discrimination in the selection of jury members, only 52.6 percent see the need for such legislation to declare the murder or assault of a civil rights worker a federal crime. Also, 75.0 percent of the faculty do not believe that civil disobedience to the extent of blocking traffic is justifiable as a means to an end; and 81.8 percent said that qualified Negro job applicants should not be given preference over qualified applicants of other races as a means of speeding up equality. As to bussing of Negro school children, 60.6 percent said they were opposed and 75.9 percent disagreed that the ultimate solution to the "Racial Problem" is intermarriage.

Differentiating from the students, 53.9 percent of the faculty do not believe that the diversity of civil rights organizations is more of a hindrance than a help to the civil rights movement as a whole and 75.4 percent said they thought that the Negro civil rights leadership has, by and large, acted wisely and responsibly in trying to achieve racial equality.

The Playboy College Opinion Survey also reflects opinions from campuses on a regional basis—in the East, Midwest, South, Southwest and West. Analysis of the returns shows that in the South, the students tend to be more "conservative," while in the Southwest, the faculty took the "conservative" point of view. The most "liberal" stand among students was taken in the Midwest, and among the faculty, in the East.

Only 34.8 percent of the Southern students thought that the Negro civil rights leadership acted wisely and responsibly in trying to achieve racial equality, and 61.5 percent of the Southwestern faculty thought that it has. This percentage, while higher than that of the Southern students, was still the lowest percentage return among all the regional faculties in this question. Also of interest is that none of the Southwestern faculty thought that qualified Negro applicants should be given preference over applicants of other races, while 5 percent of the Southern students agreed that they should.

In analyzing the regional returns, it is also interesting to note that only 10.7 percent of the faculty on Western campuses—scene of a number of demonstrations during recent years—thought that civil disobedience to the extent of blocking traffic is justifiable as a means to an end. This is the lowest return on this question among all the students and faculty.

Youth Aided In Choosing Future Job By Handbook

Every two years the U.S. Department of Labor publishes a highly useful guide, "Occupational Outlook Handbook," about the outlook for hundreds of different occupations and professions. The information it contains will assist millions of young people—and others—in planning careers and finding the best opportunities. A new edition of the handbook, 858 pages, has just been issued. Copies can be consulted in many public and school libraries. Copies may also be ordered at $5.00 each from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C. 20402.

U. S. News and World Report carries the following summary of the new edition:

Over the years, the handbook has become a standard reference work. From it, youths, parents and guidance counselors can get information on nearly every important occupation in the country.

The latest edition takes a fresh look at how automation, computers, changing technology and economic developments will affect the job picture.

Between now and 1975, this basic occupational pattern is foreseen:

For white-collar occupations, rapid growth, with nearly one third more jobs.

For service jobs, faster than average growth, increasing opportunities in this category as much as 40 percent.

For blue-collar workers, slower growth, but nearly 20 percent more jobs.

For farmers and farm workers, a decline in job opportunities.

By 1975, according to the new study, white-collar occupations will absorb half of all employed workers. This compares with just over two fifths in 1964.

Over and over again, the handbook stresses education:

"Present experience shows that the less education and training, the less chance a worker has for a good, steady job."
