Athletes feel the pressure to succeed

JEFF RADEMACHER
REPORTER

Many students at Dana are involved with campus activities and organizations in addition to their regular studies. A large proportion of these are student-athletes, some who are committed to more than one sport.

Like any student participating in outside activities, the student-athlete must maintain a respectable grade point average to meet certain eligibility requirements.

Sometimes this presents a challenge to the individual because of the additional physical aspects.

Sophomore Mike Tupa is a member of the Dana football and baseball teams. He estimates he spends six hours each weekday in class and doing homework compared with three hours he devotes to his sport, depending on the sporting season.

He was honored this fall at the Dana athletic banquet with the Dana Student-Athlete Scholar Award for his participation in football as well as a GPA between 3.5 and 4.0.

Tupa claims the way to stay on top of studies is to be well organized: "First, you have to set your priorities: you're here for your education first," he says. "If you stay organized, you can keep on top of everything and you'll be all right."

He has seen improvements in the athletic program this year with its addition of progress reports. "Each athlete needs their advisor's signature, current grades and number of absences on the report. It lets the coaches know how you're doing in the class, if you're going to class. The fastest way to get a ticket out of here is to skip classes."

Dana athletic director and women's basketball head coach Kathy Foley sees the difficulty for an athlete to sometimes reach a high academic plateau.

"It's much more difficult for a student-athlete to attain, say, a 3.5 or 3.7 GPA than a student who's not involved," commented Foley. "The student-athlete has at least three hours per day performing physically for many months. It takes a lot of mental toughness and organization."

In spite of the bodily wear-and-tear gone through by athletes, Foley stresses their main reason for coming to college: "Their number one thing was to come here to get a degree. That's sometimes overlooked by people who aren't involved in athletics.

"My number one goal for a student is to get the degree because they're not going anywhere after this, as far as making money. I also want them to reach their potential as an athlete. If they focus on those two goals I think they'll have a successful career here, both as a student and as an athlete."

As a teacher, Foley sees good things happening in the Dana athletic department to encourage mental as well as physical improvement.

She mentions that some of the coaches have team study tables while others require their athletes to pick up grades with help from the learning center. The amount of extra studying required is based on their performance in the classroom.

"If the athlete is not reaching his or her potential in the classroom we do everything we can for enhance their academic performance. You have to perform at a certain level to be able to play."

The Sights and Sounds smorgasbord sold 1,800 tickets and served around 2,000 people, including guests, students and volunteers. Rob Krumm began working on the final plans this summer and food preparation started the first week of November.

How much food does it take to feed 2,000 people at a Scandinavian Smorgasbord? When Rob Krumm and corporate chef Mikel Hibdon figured how much food they would need to order, they ordered 700 lbs of prime rib, 450 lbs of red cabbage, 520 lbs of pork lean, 500 lbs of potatoes, 480 lbs of meat and 2,200 danish tarts.

After this, 7,852 meatballs were made, 10,000 danish cookies, 4,000 rolls and 100 loaves of pumpernickel bread were still left to be made. Then came the garnishes including 12 peacocks, 20 melon birds, vegetable trees, turnip roses, beet roses and all 500 lbs of potatoes had to be made into the shape of a mushroom.

At 4 a.m. Sunday the head cook started the long day. This is after Hibdon spent 30 hours making the candy sled and 30 hours on garnishes. Each cook spent an average of 50 hours working before Sights and Sounds began. A total of 56 people worked in the kitchen that day. This includes waitresses who worked from 10 a.m.-9 p.m.

Sights and Sounds cost $12 per adult and $8.50 for children. The Smorgasbord started at 11 a.m. and sat around 250 people every 45 minutes until 2:45 p.m. Serving started again at 5 p.m. and went every 45 minutes until 6:30 p.m.

The guests had 23 different items to choose from. There were 10 salads which included Aeble/rosin salat (Apple and raisin salad), 11 hot items such as Flaeskstegmed bloomer/aeble fyld (roast pork stuffed with prunes and apples) and Danske frikadeller (Danish Meatballs) and also assorted desserts.

Sights and Sounds at Dana College has become well known all over the country. The Scandinavian Smorgasbord was written about in 300 newspapers across the country. People from all over the nation were bused in to be a part of this experience.

"Although Sights and Sounds of Christmas entails a great deal of work, Dana's gift back to the community and the enjoyment they receive from it makes it all worth it" stated Krumm.

Haas named All-American

Stacy Haas has been named to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) All-American third team for the 1993 season.

Haas, a sophomore from Dubuque, Iowa, is the first player in the history of Dana volleyball to receive All-American recognition.

She also received honors for Nebraska Iowa Athletic Conference (NIAC) All Conference, NAIA District 11 All District and All Region for the NAIA Northwest Region.

Haas led the Vikings in kills this season with a 4.97 per game average. She tallied 672 kills for the year.

Find the lost Christmas spirit

Only fifteen days until Christmas! Are you ready? I don't mean do you have all of your Christmas shopping done or your Christmas cards sent. I mean are you ready for Christmas?

The Christmas spirit has a tendency to get lost in the busyness of the season. Finals and last-minute research papers hang over everyone's head.

Christmas shoppers cut off other cars as they race down Dodge Street. Grumbles about family get-togethers and complaints about how am I going to get everything done dominate conversation this time of the year.

Do you remember why we celebrate Christmas? I know it's easy to get confused with all the reference to Santa and the emphasis on buying the perfect gift.

Everyone seems to forget that all Christians already received the perfect gift nearly two thousand years ago when Jesus was born in a stable in Bethlehem. Now there's a gift that keeps on giving.

So why doesn't anyone seem to have the Christmas spirit? Newspapers and televisions bring us the news of our nation: five people were killed and 18 wounded as an angry gunman opened fire on a New York City rush-hour commuter train Tuesday night. A 20-year-old man was found dead on an Omaha street Monday morning, killed apparently for his van. It doesn't seem much like Christmas does it?

Dig deep within yourself during finals week and throughout the rest of this Christmas season to find the Christmas spirit we all seem to have lost. No, not lost; just misplaced. A test is just a test. A paper is just a paper. Christ and Christmas are forever. Share some of that joy with others. Merry Christmas!

The National Championship dilemma

SHAWN OSBAHR
EDITORIALIST

College football is in a predicament. There are four teams that deserve a shot at the national title. The problem? The national title will be decided more than likely in only one game, the Orange Bowl. The Federal Express Orange Bowl matches up the No. 1 and No. 2 ranked teams in the bowl coalition poll.

As of last week, the Nebraska Cornhuskers (11-0) held the number one spot with the Florida State Seminoles (11-1) falling just a few points short. We cannot forget about the West Virginia Mountaineers (11-0) ranked third and the fifth ranked Fighting Irish of Notre Dame (10-1). The fourth ranked team in the country is Auburn (11-0), who has been penalized for NCAA violations, will not be able to prove their worth in a bowl game.

To most of us, the national championship game should be elementary. Let the two eligible unbeaten teams play for the title. But, wouldn't you know it, it isn't that easy.

We already know that Nebraska will play Florida State on New Year's Day. Notre Dame will meet seventh ranked Texas A&M in the Mobile Cotton Bowl. And, in the USF&G Sugar Bowl, West Virginia collides with Florida.

Now, let's start with the what ifs. What if Nebraska and West Virginia both win? What if Florida State thrashes Nebraska and once again West Virginia wins? What if West Virginia wins, meanwhile Nebraska loses? What if Notre Dame wins and both Nebraska and West Virginia lose? Is your head spinning yet? What ever happens, we could be looking at co-champions once again. This is exactly what the bowl coalition was supposed to eliminate.

Now let's look at how these four teams stack up in the competition for No. 1. Nebraska currently holds the number one position, so it's theirs to lose, or keep. The strongest argument against Nebraska is that they didn't play a full schedule of I-A opponents (opened season with 1-AA North Texas). Also, their one point victory at Kansas essentially was a tie. The Jayhawks went for the win and missed the two-point conversion. Also, Nebraska didn't play a single team ranked in the top 10.

Florida State on the other hand easily played, and for the most part dominated, the country's most difficult schedule. Their only loss, at Notre Dame, ended on the Irish's 14 yard line and throwing into the end-zone for the tying or winning touchdown. Florida State averaged a +33.6

margin of victory against all opponents. They also went 2-1 against top 10 teams.

Now, if anyone has any complaints over the situation at hand, it has to be West Virginia. What separates them from Nebraska? Both are 11-0, and West Virginia beat Boston College (on the road), who beat Notre Dame (on the road), who beat Florida State. But, the Mountaineers' schedule was the weakest of the top five teams and don't have the powerhouse reputation that follows Nebraska, Notre Dame and Florida State.

The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame lay claim to a record just short of perfect. Notre Dame dominated for the most part, the Florida State game. The only blemish on their season was the loss to Boston College. Earlier in the year, Boston College got beat by Northwestern, who isn't even ranked.

So among this mix, who will emerge on top? Without a doubt, this year proved that the bowl coalition isn't flawless. In fact, this season proved that college football needs a playoff system of some sort. In basketball there is the final four tournament and in baseball there is the double elimination College World Series. This seems to be the only solution to the problem. We'll have to wait and see what the geniuses in the NCAA come up with next.

Isn't a baby the reason Chris'mas got started?

A few times ago I was talkin' about Christ people. I said then that I was thinkin' about bein' one of the Christ people, but then it seemed too easy—or too hard. 'Sides only real nice people are Christ people. I don't think I fit.

Yet I was talkin' to a preacher 'bout it, and he said anybody could be one of the Christ people if they just 'mitted that they weren't very good. So I been thinkin'. But I don't know. Just doesn't seem right.

But it's jes 'bout Chris'mas. That's pretty import'nt to Christ people. Yet lookin' 'round it seem pretty import'nt to most people. I can't figger it out.

It seems lotta people get all 'cited 'bout Chris'mas. Yet don't seem to pay much 'tention to it bein' the birthday of Jesus. As I see it that's what got Chris'mas started.

But now seems some people think you mustn't say anythin' about Jesus at Chris'mas. Jes' buy presents, sing White Chris'mas, partridge in a pear tree, an' stuff like that. Kids talk about Santa and Rudolf an' all that. Those thin's are ok, but how come thay's nothin' 'bout Jesus.

Someone told me it's 'gainst the law to put a scene 'bout Jesus' bein' born in a park. Funny how lotta people do so much 'bout Chris'mas but nothin' 'bout Jesus' birthday.

Yet some people do somethin' 'bout Jesus birthday. On TV a bit ago, (I guess on the t'day show) some people sang somethin' 'bout 'cuz a babe was born. I liked that, 'cuz lotta times people talk about Chris'mas and they don't say nothin' 'bout a babe's bein' born.

At Dana some people sing many songs 'bout it. One song I like says somethin' 'bout tellin' it on the mount'n 'bout Jesus bein' born. That's what Christ people should do. But if I get to be one of those Christ people, do I want to tell it on the mount'n? I think maybe I should.

Campus Ministry offers Interim opportunities

Greetings from Campus Ministry!

During the Interim semester the following opportunities will be offered to the Dana campus:

A special extended Forum Debate Series program entitled "Human Sexuality: Constructing a Community Ethic" is being jointly sponsored by the Forum, the Dean's Office and Campus Ministry. The study document of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, "The Church and Human Sexuality: A Lutheran Perspective," will serve as the focus of our discussion.

The debate series will meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 12:30-2 p.m. in the Forum beginning January 10 and concluding January 21. Participants are invited to bring their lunch. Responses to the study document will be forwarded to the Church-wide Offices of the ELCA for their consideration. This will prove a great opportunity for our campus community to consider a vitally important topic around which there is much confusion and inadequate understanding.

The second opportunity is entitled "Servant Saturdays," sponsored by the Student Development Office and Campus Ministry of Dana College and the Religious Life Council of Midland Lutheran College. Each of the three Saturdays during Interim (January 8, 15, 22) from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. we will be providing service to three different agencies in Omaha.

Students will have the opportunity to either prepare and serve lunch to homeless persons at the Open Door Mission, provide child-care for homeless children at the Lydia House or do construction work with a poor family at a Habitat for Humanity job sight.

Only 15 students from Dana College (and 15 from Midland) will be able to work on any given Saturday. Sign up begins today at either the Student Development Office or the Campus Ministry Center and must be made by January 6. Students will be accepted on a first come, first serviced basis. Come share in the opportunity to serve, grow and meet new people!

Liberal Arts Reading Program receives good student responses

DENISE DAUBENDIEK

"Students have a high level of appreciation for good literature and are respectful of fellow students' contributions," concluded Dr. Sybille Bartels after reading student responses to this semester's Liberal Arts Reading Program (LARP).

LARP combines reading novels and viewing movies that share a common theme. Students are also required to attend campus events throughout the semester and write a reflection paper. Before graduating, students must complete a semester of LARP for every year at Dana.

"The Stone Angel" by Margaret Laurence was given the best evaluation among LARP students. On a 10-1 scale with 10 the highest, 47 percent awarded this novel a nine or 10. It was followed by Camara Laye's "The Dark Child" which received that rating from 38 percent of the students.

Movies viewed for LARP were given lower scores. According to Bartels, "This is surprising because the students had recommended them in the past." One

New Federal Financial Aid Forms will available soon for 1994-95 school year

Did you apply for federal financial aid last year? Are you planning to apply for financial aid again next year? If the answer to either question is "yes", the Financial Aid office reminds you that you will want to pay close attention to a major change in the application process.

Students may recall to receive federal and state grants, loans and other financial aid based on "need" it is necessary to complete a form called the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The application asks you to provide information about yourself and, if applicable, your family. There are some very basic questions about yourself as well as statements about family size, income and assets.

In previous years students were required to complete every question each year the application was completed. To apply for the 1994-95 year, however, students will receive a document called a Renewal Application which is a partially completed application that includes many responses from the 1993-94 application. The Renewal Application closely resembles the Student Aid Report (SAR) that most students are familiar with. Nationally, nearly 8 million Renewal Applications will be mailed to students Nov. 17- Dec. 31.

Mark Anderson, Director of Financial Aid has several suggestions and words of caution for students who complete the Renewal Application. "First, because it is so new, be sure that you read all questions carefully. Also, just because the answer was given on an application last year doesn't mean that the answer is still accurate today. Students should not quickly scan the questions and answers and assume nothing has changed." Anderson went on to say that if a response is no longer correct the Renewal Application provides a place to put the right answer.

Renewal Applications are being mailed to students using the permanent address given on last year's application. Students should inform their parents that a large envelope will come with a return address of "Federal Student Aid Programs" printed on it. If they aren't aware of what it is they might not think it is important.

Additional information will go out to students prior to leaving for the holiday which will include the college's financial aid application as well as detailed instructions on completing the Renewal Application. Anyone interested in applying for financial aid who doesn't receive a Renewal Application by Jan. 3 should contact the Financial Aid office during the first week of Interim.

Environmental Awareness Organization members find a mess in new barrels

The Environmental Awareness Organization (EAO) is excited to say that over 70 pounds of aluminum were brought to the local recycling center Saturday as part of the new campus-wide effort to divert waste to landfills. The cans were collected over a four week period. In two trips to the recycling center since the project began in October, 110 pounds of aluminum have been collected.

While collecting the cans, EAO members have been finding much more than empty cans. Half-eaten bananas, tissues, paper, chewing tobacco and other garbage have found their way into the maroon barrels. Beside the obvious difficulty this causes when sorting the "good from the bad", one barrel was found to contain a large number of fruit flies.

Mark Anderson, EAO advisor, commented that this raises two concerns the organization has. "The biggest issue is one of sanitation. No one wants to have fruit flies in the residence halls, but when you have all that soup in the bottom of the barrel for several days you are fortunate if you don't attract things worse than the flies."

EAO also indicated that the new phone books have arrived and will be distributed soon. Students, faculty and staff are asked to drop their old books in one of the cardboard boxes (labeled for this purpose) in their building so that they can be taken to HunTel to be recycled.

EAO would like to extend their sincere thanks to all who have helped this year.

Grappendorf sets new school scoring mark in Lady Vikes win

ROBERT BOYD
SPORTS EDITOR

Tuesday night the Lady Vikes won their second game in a thrilling 79-76 overtime game against Dakota Wesleyan behind a school record 42 point performance by junior guard Heidi Grappendorf. The Lady Vikings now have a 2-5 overall record.

Grappendorf broke the school record held by Cathy Shaw when she pumped in 41 points last year against Chaderon State.

Grappendorf carried the Lady Vikes in the first-half by scoring 20 points including 14 straight to give the Vikes a 34-30 half-time lead. Freshman Nicole Buenning hit two free throws with 3:08 left in regulation to force the game into overtime.

In overtime, the Lady Vikes raced out to a 74-69 lead but Dakota Wesleyan battled back to get within a point, 77-76. Grappendorf put the game away when she hit two free throws with 12 seconds left.

Overshadowed by Grappendorf's 42 point game was the Lady Vikings overall team defense. Dana forced 25 Tiger turnovers with a full-court press. They converted many of those turnovers into easy fast-break baskets.

Complimenting Grappendorf was Brenda Mechels with 15 points and Melanie Hild with 10. Buenning led the team in rebounds with 11 and Karla Meyer had nine with four steals.

Saturday the Lady Vikes traveled to Dallas, Texas and played in the University of Dallas Tourney.

The Vikings played Marian College in the first round and was dumped 55-45. The Vikings shot only 28 percent from the field and committed 21 turnovers in the loss.

Grappendorf warmed up for her performance against Dakota Wesleyan when she exploded for 37 points in the Vikings first win of the season, 75-68, against the University of Dallas.

Grappendorf was red hot from the outside as she nailed seven three-pointers in the win. Mechels helped in scoring as she had 15 points and 12 rebounds. Buenning grabbed 16 boards and scored seven points.

The Lady Vikings hope to continue their two game winning streak tonight as they take on York College in Borup Coliseum. Then they will host Sioux Falls College on Monday.

Vikings get thumped in rematch with Sioux Falls

ROBERT MENDOZA
SPORTS REPORTER

The Dana Vikings men's basketball team traveled to Sioux Falls on Saturday and were defeated 82-53. This was the second meeting between the two teams. Sioux Falls was victorious three weeks ago by the score of 111-88.

Coach Dave Jensen stated that the Vikings played excellent defense, holding the Sioux Falls team to 44 percent shooting.

"We just couldn't put the ball in the hole," said Jensen. The Vikings shot a dismal 29 percent from the floor and 61 percent from the charity stripe.

The Vikings forced 22 turnovers while only committing 15 as a team. The Vikings were out-rebounded 56 to 43. Coach

Jensen stressed the fact that "We need to rebound better as a team if we are going to compete in the NIAC (Nebraska Iowa Athletic Conference) this year. We need to box out and keep opposing teams off the boards."

The Vikings were led on offense by guard Rob Coursey who made seven of ten shots from the floor and had 15 points. Forward Chris Tignor had eight to pace the Vikings. The Vikes were led in rebounding by Shawn Fasbender and Coursey who had nine and five respectively.

The Vikings will play host to the Teikyo Westmar Eagles on Saturday and Briar Cliff on Tuesday.
