Lil' siblings will be weekend guests

DENISE DAUBENDIEK
COPY EDITOR

The Residence Hall Association (RHA) will hold Lil' Sibling Weekend Feb. 18-20. Friends and family members age 4 - 14 will be able to visit Dana students and participate in three days of planned activities.

As they arrive on Feb. 18, students can give their visitors a tour of the campus. The women's basketball team plays Doane in Borup Coliseum at 7:30 p.m. and lil' siblings are invited to attend with their student hosts.

Watching cartoons in hall television lounges will lead off the activities on Feb. 19. The day includes a coin hunt, carnival games, open swimming in Borup and clowns and juggling by the Fitz Family. Prizes will be awarded to participants.

The day will conclude with a men's basketball game followed by movie presentations. "Aladdin" will be shown on the second floor of Argo hall and "Home Alone" on the third floor of Blair hall.

A special brunch for the lil' siblings will be held on Feb. 20. Tickets will be available for purchase at each mealtime throughout the weekend.

"It is an opportunity for younger members of a student's family to see what life is like on a college campus and have fun doing it," says Kris Flack, president of RHA.

Other upcoming events planned by RHA are Vegas Night March 3 and "Gone Hog Wild" April 29. The first meeting of the semester will be Tuesday at 9 p.m. in the Forum. RHA is open for all on campus students and always welcomes new members.

Free confidential counseling offered

Professional counseling is offered to Dana students, faculty and staff free of charge. Diane Nickeson-Ray and Dave Hoppe provide individual, couple and group services and ensure confidentiality.

The Counseling Center is located in Pioneer Memorial 209. It is best to call and arrange an appointment but referrals are accepted when necessary.

In the fall semester 58 sought counseling. Sixteen were returning clients and 42 were new to the program. This included 39 females and 19 males. Hoppe did 14 chemical dependency evaluations.

Internships valuable to Dana students

STAN SHAW REPORTER

January 1994 proved to be a valuable lesson in life for many students who are planning on graduating in May. For seniors, it was an opportunity to get away from the studying and test taking and get a taste of the real world through essential internships and practicums.

To some students interim is a time to take life slow, relax and study... once in a while. But to others, it was a reality check for they know that if they do not get a job after they graduate it might be the first two nails in their own coffin.

Jon Rademacher, a senior who plans on graduating with majors in communications and broadcasting, did an internship at KESY radio station in Omaha. He was responsible for doing work in production and programming.

"It gave me a really good look at commercial radio and what I can expect once I get there. It reinforced a lot of what I already knew," said Rademacher.

Rademacher has worked for the Dana radio station, KDCV, for the last four years and the last two years he served as program director.

Rademacher said that he was glad that he liked his experience at KESY and it did not make him want to change his major all of the sudden.

"Radio is not your typical 9-5 desk job. It is constantly changing. You get a chance to meet people. I love to have fun and this gave me the chance," said Rademacher.

Another student who took advantage of the month of January was junior social work major, Jeremy Johnson. He did his practicum at the Nebraska AIDS Project in Omaha where he worked with their volunteer program.

Part of the time he was responsible for transporting patients to and from the hospital.

He also assisted in the development of an accurate list of AIDS volunteers throughout the state.

"In the future I want to be a medical social worker. In the social work field AIDS is going to affect everyone and I think everyone who is going into health care should be aware of people with AIDS," said Johnson.

Not only was Johnson's experience helpful for his future, it was also educational. "AIDS is no longer considered a 'gay' disease because it is growing in the female heterosexual population," said Johnson.

One student who travelled all the way to New York for his internship was senior Kyle Herzog. He will graduate in May with a triple major in economics, accounting and finance. While he was in the "Big Apple" Herzog did research work in the finance department for Oscar Gruss and Sons, a stock brokerage firm.

"I liked the job. I hope that perhaps I can use it as a spring board for my future," said Herzog.

The firm emphasized underwriting and in order for that to take place it had to make sure it would be profitable. Herzog would do research on the companies that needed the underwriting and report back to tell whether or not it would be beneficial for Oscar Gruss and Sons to assist the companies.

In approximately four months the rest of the graduating senior class will be zooming out into the jungle looking for jobs and hopefully success.

These three students and the others who were fortunate to do internships got the first taste of the professional working world. Next thing they know, it will be time for their tenth year graduation reunion.

Learning Center helps 124 students during fall

HEIDI GERTH REPORTER

The Learning Center, located on the first floor of the library, held 263 tutorials for 124 students last semester. This is a 77 percent increase from the 1992-93 school year.

Director Lori Nielsen and the 10 student tutors were available an average of 22 hours a week. They assisted in 15 courses, facilitated study groups and helped with reading and writing skills.

Along with the tutors, two computers were available for homework assistance.

Materials to help prepare for the Pre-Professional Skills Test (PPST) were also found in the Learning Center.

The Learning Center is ready for business again this semester. It is open daily Monday-Friday 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. and new evening hours Sunday-Thursday 7-10 p.m.

Tutors are available for basic math, college algebra, environmental science, introduction to chemistry, general chemistry, business statistics, English literature II, introduction to the Bible, introduction to religion, general psychology and many other courses.

Help for writing papers, studying for exams and improving reading comprehension along with PPST materials are also available this semester.

For more information, stop by the Learning Center or call Nielsen at x. 7334.

I'm tired of penguin weather

Boy, is it cold! Has it been cold enough out there for you? These are the first words out of everyone's mouth these days.

For the past six months, oh I'm sorry, only a week, temperatures have struggled to reach above 10 degrees Fahrenheit. Every night under clear Midwestern skies the mercury has plummeted below zero.

This winter I've been a wimp about the cold. While Nebraska was experiencing the January deep freeze I was in Germany where temperatures were just above zero degrees Celsius. A big difference! Nebraska may have misleading winter sunshine but through the gray clouds Europe keeps mild temperatures.

But the good news is upon us. The cold snap has finally broken. This weekend temperatures are expected to reach and even climb over the freezing mark. Time to break out the tanning lotion.

Maybe Blair can break some of this ice off their streets. Maybe my landlady can scoop the first snow of the season off of the sidewalk.

I used to like winter. I used to applaud every day of potential snowman and fort building weather.

I think I also loved winter when I wasn't a commuting student. Granted I only live at Brookview Apartments on the other side of Blair but it seems more difficult to leave my apartment to get into a cold car than it ever did to walk across campus to class. Even worse is coming back in the evenings for some meeting or another.

My pickup doesn't like it much either. He moans and groans to have to run for only 10 minutes at a time.

But this weekend it will be a little warmer, a heat wave for winter in Nebraska. According to that darn groundhog, this warmth won't spell the end of winter.

My philosophy is just don't go outside. Humans should hibernate like bears do.

Curl up in your bed with a nice fluffy blanket, a cup of hot chocolate and a good book and wait for July. Then we'll be wishing for winter...

CBO report damages health plan

SHAWN OSBAHR

EDITORIALIST

The Congressional Budget Office gave a report this week on the Clinton health plan that was far less than favorable.

The CBO report is bad news for the administration because it draws focus to the cost of the plan. Finally someone is looking at the financial aspects of the plan. Before this report, the future of the health plan relied on emotions.

This administration fabricated their own crises and persuaded everyone to feel the pain of the uninsured. Then, they held their secret meetings and came out with a plan that they viewed as irreplaceable.

President Clinton is losing support fast for this plan, especially in his own party. Rep. Peter Hoagland, D-Neb., who is on the committee, said, "I think it might do some temporary damage to the plan, but I think the plan is falling of its own weight anyway."

The CBO announced in its findings that the Clinton plan would add $74 billion to the federal deficit from 1995 to 2000.

This is quite significant since the Clintons estimated that it would save $59 billion over the six years. They were off $133 billion. Ever noticed how this administration always sees roses while the rest of us see only thorns.

As more and more denounce the plan, I don't understand why the President can't just admit that there are better alternatives.

On Wednesday, the United States' top business leaders backed the less ambitious reform plan of Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn.

The White House put pressure on this influential business roundtable, which is composed of 225 heads of America's largest corporations, to remain neutral.

What kind of logic is that? Why shouldn't they be able to give their honest opinion of which plan they thought was best?

It just goes to show you that Clinton is scared. He is scared because the Cooper plan will put less government into our lives. Without big government control, the need for liberals fades away.

At a General Motors plant in Louisiana, Clinton defended his plan to workers who have some of the best health benefits in the country. He told them that others should have the same security.

He insisted, "What the president wants to do is to keep the system we've got now and give it to everybody." This is socialism at its finest.

When we as a society start relying on the government to give us things, then we lose our freedom. We give up control over our lives and hand it over to the government.

The more we give away, the more they think that we want them to take care of us. We should not let the government control us. We should control the government.

Letter to the editor

Improved fan conduct requested

On behalf of the athletic department, I would like to say the support at our men's basketball games has been wonderful this year and the attendance at volleyball and women's basketball is greatly improved.

The enthusiasm, spirit and energy shown by our students is gratefully appreciated and we hope the attendance and support continues to climb.

The other side of the coin is that we have had some unfortunate occurrences at many of our home contests. Last Saturday seemed to bring the problems to the front.

Disruptive behavior such as abusive language toward players and officials, stepping onto the playing floor, throwing things onto the playing floor, grabbing officials' jerseys and arguments with off-campus guests are inexcusable and intolerable acts during public sporting events.

During Saturday's contests I received complaints from spectators, officials, and from the visiting teams about abusive language and inappropriate behavior. Fans commented that they were glad they didn't bring their kids or that they would never bring them again.

As our teams get better and better our reputation is getting worse and worse. These types of behaviors are not helping our teams and our coaches do not accept nor condone these behaviors.

Grabbing an official's jersey does not convince them to call the game in our favor, in fact it adversely affects our teams.

We realize that student support is critical, however, it is imperative that we treat our opponents and community guests with respect.

I realize the actions of a few are not necessarily representative of Dana students in general. It is my hope that we can see a marked improvement in conduct during the rest of the winter sports season and continue with acceptable behavior during the spring sports season.

When visiting teams come to "OUR HOUSE" they should be able to tell they are playing on the road. We have excellent cheerleaders this year and they do a good job of leading chants throughout the game.

An entire crowd standing and chanting in unison is going to inspire our team and bother the opponents more than what has been taking place.

When the opponent is down or the game is on the line we need a unified crowd on their feet making noise. These types of things will help our teams develop the "HOME COURT ADVANTAGE" that is needed.

And so, I hope that when the next home contest takes place "THE GAME" is the main event.

Eleven Dana students see the great cathedrals of Europe

Great European cathedrals "overwhelm" students

KRIS FLACK REPORTER

Two groups of students ventured to Europe over Interim, but 11 focused their attention on visiting Great Britain, France and Germany and the cathedrals in each country.

Marcus Albers, Stephanie Carlson, Amy Dicke, Jill Drake, Roxane Fenton, Kana Kitabatake, Mariko Kishida, Matthew Leaf, R.J. Redden, Janet Reisdorff and Brad Volcek were accompanied by faculty members, Michael Anderson and Jeanmarie Nielsen.

Anderson had been there many times before and even lived there for a year. This was the second group of Dana students he has taken to Europe.

He said that he "saw so many spectacular things," that it was difficult to choose a favorite. There were many optional attractions, such as museums, that Anderson made a point to see. He visited 29 churches in all, while the students managed to see about 20 on the average.

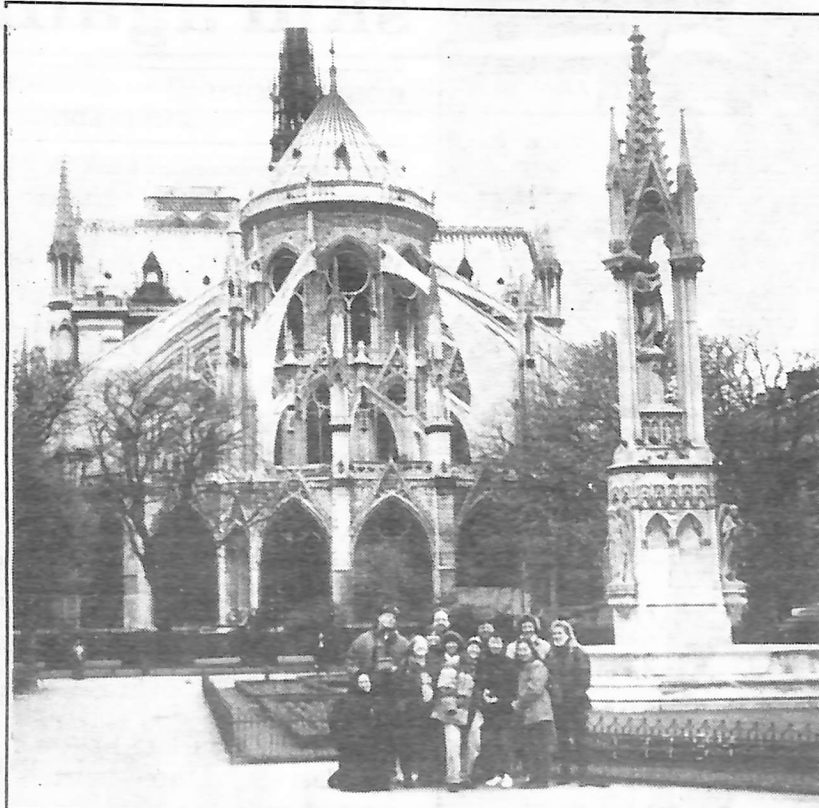

"The cathedrals have so many other disciplines that come into play," said Anderson. He cited some of these as: history, art, architecture, sociology, music and culture.

Nielsen met up with the group in England. She described the country as being so old compared to the United States which is still very young as far as history is concerned.

She mentioned that even with all the historically important places in England, it's all commonplace to the residents there.

"Americans tend to romanticize the country and its history, but there it's just everyday," claimed Nielsen.

She also said that travelling has become a necessity for her. It helps keep her "in perspective with the universe." She further explained this by saying that people have become so busy and

"bogged down" with events in their lives, and trips like this tend to be great stress relievers.

The thing she enjoyed most was visiting the churches in the small country towns. Compared to the big international cities where you can't get a real sense of what the country is all about, the small towns seemed to be less crowded and the people were very eager to meet and talk with tourists and especially the students, Nielsen said.

Drake said she enjoyed Cologne, Germany, the town they started in, the best. She also enjoyed Salzburg, Austria, where Mozart was born and lived. Salzburg is also where they met the students on the German trip.

Some other favorite sights include going to Notre Dame, hearing the boys' choir, seeing the Mona Lisa, watching the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace and seeing Les Miserables at the Palace Theatre.

Leaf said that some of his dislikes were that the water was more expensive than the beer and that you had to pay to use the toilets.

He liked riding the trains because they ran on time. He also liked seeing the castles. He said "They were very impressive. They were majestic. The beauty was over-whelming."

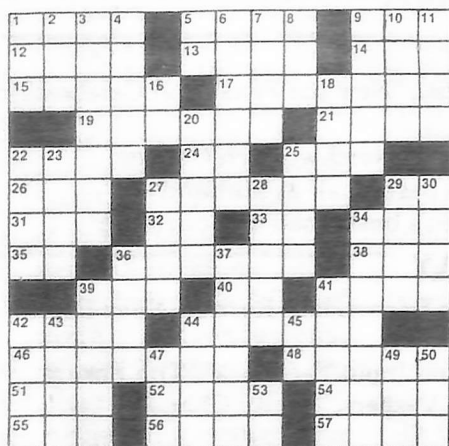

Redden noticed the difference between some of the cathedrals. The baroque churches had more gold and decoration. "It was interesting to see how years ago people saw God and compare it to how I see God today." She also said that the Frauenkirche churches were very plain and simple in contrast.

The entire group will be presenting a session on their trip for their final grade. The date for the presentation on "The Great Cathedrals in England" by Drake, Fenton and Redden is Monday at 7 p.m. in the Forum.

The presentation on "Cathedral Art and Cathedrals in France" by Albers, Carlson, Kishida and Kitabatake will be next Thursday at 9 a.m. in the Gardner Lecture Hall (DCC). The presentation on "Germany's Cathedrals" by Dicke, Leaf, Reisdorff and Volcek will be on Feb. 21 at 3 p.m. in the Forum.

Vikings halt two game losing skid against Teikyo Westmar

ROBERT BOYD

The Vikings bounced back from a tough loss against Hastings on Saturday and beat Teikyo Westmar, 100-93, in a high scoring game Monday night at LeMars, Iowa.

Hot outside shooting burns Westmar

The Vikings hit 7-of-12 shots from three-point land in the win to up their record to 14-13 overall. It was the Vikings' second win of the season against Teikyo Westmar as the Vikings beat the Eagles 99-83 in December.

The Vikings should have taken a five point lead into halftime but a last second three-quarters court shot by the Eagles narrowed the Viking lead to two at 42-40.

The outside shooting of guards Jason Jackson and Rob Coursey keyed a second half Viking scoring explosion. The Vikings had a 17-point lead mid-way through the half. The Eagles battled back on their home court though and tied the game. The Vikings held them off by nailing some late free-throws to secure the 100-93 win.

Viking head coach Dave Jensen commented, "We played well offensively especially from behind the three-point line, but we gave up too many points."

Jackson, a 5-11 junior, led all Viking scorers with 25 points. He has scored 20 points in each of the last three games.

"Jason has been playing real well. He is a good leader and has great determination. If everyone on the team played like he did Saturday against Hastings we would have won," stated Jensen. "He has played good offensively but also has been playing very well defensively."

Jackson hit 10-of-12 from the floor and 2-of-2 from three-point land. He also pulled down seven rebounds and dished out four assists.

Coursey nailed 4-of-7 three-point shots and was 8-of-14 from the field as he ended up with 24 points.

Battle for conference standings

The Vikings are battling for position in the Nebraska-Iowa Athletic Conference (NIAC) district playoffs at the end of the month. At the current time the Vikings are fifth in the conference with a 3-5 conference record. They are trailing Northwestern (8-0), Nebraska Wesleyan (7-3), Hastings (5-4) and Doane (4-5).

"The loss to Hastings really hurt us," said Jensen. "We are really battling for third and fourth since Hastings will be suspended from post-season play due to the situation with their head coach."

The Vikings will play at Concordia tonight and at Doane on Saturday in two huge conference games for the Vikings.

"We have two big games this weekend," commented Jensen but had one concern. "We really appreciated the fan support in the Hastings game, but we don't want any vulgar things chanted from the fans. We want to leave a good impression of ourselves."
