The freshmen were separated from the upperclassmen this year, and were located in a hall by themselves.

There were many mixed opinions and feelings about this separation.

Proseparationists said that the freshmen needed a year to get to know their surroundings, and that freshmen had certain needs that could be met by having the freshmen grouped together. The Antiseparationists said that the freshmen should be intermingled with the upperclassmen, so that the upperclassmen could help them settle in, help them study, etc. Only time will tell which way was right.
